Arrangement

This collection is arranged in three series. Series I: Culinary Pamphlets includes about 620 pamphlets, advertisements, and newspaper clippings/reproductions relating to food products, ingredients, and small appliances. These date from about 1896-the early 2000s. This series is mostly in its original order as it was received from the collector's family. While the folders are in alphabetical order (by letter and by select company), this does not reflect a strict alphabetical order of individual items. The collector sometimes filed an item by company name, author, or title. During processing, some folders were broken up into multiple folders, which is noted in the finding aid. See the detailed list to identify specific items.

Series II: Correspondence contains 6 folders of printed emails include conversations between Olver and publishers, editors, and other authors about articles and encyclopedia contributions, dating to the early 2000s. These are in the original order received from the collector's family.

Series III: Objects includes several artifacts found among the boxes of donated cookbooks.

Immediate Source of Acquisition

This item was actually found in Lynne Olver's book collection during the cataloging process. It was removed and added to the manuscript collection in 2022.

Scope and Content

Based on information on the Food Timeline, this is believed to be Lynne Olver's grandmother's school notebook/recipe book: <https://www.foodtimeline.org/foodfaq.html>. The cover reads: "Laura R. Crystal 7B Domestic Science" and the notebook contains recipes, food preservation techniques, household management rules, and various clippings. There is also an ink drawing.

While the handwritten sections are not dated, newspaper clippings suggest this was created and/or kept in the mid 1910s.
