Biographical/Historical Information

Alfred W. harris was born free in Fairfax County, Virginia, in 1854, the son of Henry Harris. Alfred W. Harris was a member of the very large family of HARRISES in the counties of Fairfax and Prince William. They were free in these counties as early as the year 1776.

Harris attended the public schools in Alexandria, Virginia. He studied law privately in the office of a African American lawyer, George W. Mitchell, and finally enrolled in the law department of Howard University , where he graduated in 1881. Alfred Harris moved to Petersburg, Virginia in the 1870's. Here he became involved in local politics and began his practice of law.

In 1881 Harris was elected to the House of Delegate Representing Dinwiddie County. Mr. Harris served in the house until 1888. In 1882 Alfred harris presented the bill chartering the Virginia Normal and Collegiate Institute, now Virginia state university. Mr. Harris was a very active in a number civic and social organizations in and around the city of Petersburg.

Mr.Harris served as the first secretary of the board of visitors for Virginia State University and was later Principal of the John A. Dix School in Dinwidde.
