Preferred Citation

[Description and date of item], [Box/folder number], Motion Picture Collection, A&M 4370, West Virginia and Regional History Center, West Virginia University Libraries, Morgantown, West Virginia.

Scope and Contents

This collection contains motion pictures related to West Virginia and the greater Appalachian region. Mediums include news footage, documentary films, industrials and West Virginia University footage.

Although a single collection, this audiovisual content was acquired from a variety of sources, such as the U.S. Department of Agriculture, WVU-TV, Appalachian Film, and Monongalia County. Subjects include WVU sporting events, the coal mining industry and Appalachian culture, such as crafts, folk music and parades.

Collection highlights include WVU football games from as early as 1941, a 1918 World War I victory parade added by future presidential nominee John W. Davis, and the First Annual Appalachian People's Music Fair of 1970.

A list of the digitized films is available in the digital object attached to this collection ("Films from the Motion Picture Collection").

A more detailed contents list for this collection is also available upon request. Additional information includes film base, type of sound, film width, and in some cases notes explaining why a film has multiple reels.

Arrangement

The collection remains arranged as it was found in the early 2020s during inventory review, and does not seem to indicate any original order. Some films include multiple reels. This may indicate one of the following:

duplicate copies of the same film (either genuine duplicates or similar copies, such as one color film without sound and one black and white film with sound), one film that was long enough to be broken into parts (e.g., parts 1 and 2), or a film that has multiple reels for multiple aspects (e.g., an optical reel and a sound reel).

Describes the small coal-mining town of David, KY., and shows typical activities of a miner and his family. Follows the coal-mining process, showing how the coal is removed from the mine with the help of cutter bars, drills, dynamite, and conveyer belts, and how it is washed, relieved of impurities, sorted, and loaded on railroad cars. Discusses safety precautions taken by miners, shows the location of coal-producing areas in the United States, and discusses various uses of coal and its by products.

This is the optical track for Rural Clinics Film, the long version, as done by Muriel Akamatsu and Tom Jamrose for the Regional Medical Program. The edited original for this long version was re-edited in to a film clip, which was distributed by the News Service. Therefore, the original pi for the long version of Rural Clinics (sometimes referred to as Rural Cities) no longer exists.
