Biographical / Historical

Christine Weiss Daugherty is an advocate in issues related to women's economic equality, rural economic development, and non-profit management. The content of this collection reflects Daugherty's varied professional and avocational background. Early in her career, she ran Garretts Bend Pottery Studio (1972-1979), which was located on Great Oak Farm in Lincoln County, West Virginia. Great Oak Farm was a non-profit camp for low income Appalachian youth founded by Daugherty and her then husband, Dr. Robert (Bob) Weiss, which Daugherty was active with until the 1990s. From 1979-1988, she was the executive director of Women and Employment (later, Center for Economic Options) which advocated for career advancement for women in West Virginia. In 1988, she became the senior project associate with the Ms. Foundation for Women.

Beginning in 1988, she started Rural Strategies, a consulting firm specializing in rural economic development and women and community economic development. From 1990-1993, she had a fellowship with the Kellogg International Leadership Program that facilitated her travel to international destinations.

She served as interim co-director of the West Virginia University Center for Women's Studies for the academic year 1992-1993 and earned her Regents B.A. from West Virginia State College in 1994. In 1996, she was named senior program advisor to the Volunteers in Overseas Cooperative Assistance (VOCA/VOKA) Rural Development Project in Slovakia which lasted 3 years. In addition, she has participated in numerous other projects and volunteer organizations. She has received multiple awards for her activist work, including the Katherine Coleman Goble Johnson Women Making History Award.

Scope and Contents

This collection includes materials pertaining to Christine Weiss Daugherty and her work with women's economic development, rural economic development, non-profit management, and international development.

Materials include correspondence, photographs, newspaper clippings, resumes, a diploma, magazines, books, pamphlets, notes, contact lists, journals, scrapbooks, research materials, interviews, family history materials, economic reports, newsletters, and CDs. The collection is divided into five series. There is some overlap between the series, especially concerning Daugherty's work with the Kellogg Foundation and international economic development.

Series 1. Christine Weiss Daugherty Life and Achievements: This series contains materials produced and collected by Christine Weiss Daugherty pertaining to her family history, personal life, and professional achievements from 1954-2021.
