Biographical / Historical

During 19th and 20th century broadsides were one of the most popular ways to disseminate information to the public. While ephemeral in nature, broadsides contain significant information on events, current news, government decisions, advertisements for products and services, social causes, and much more. In West Virginia broadsides have popularly been used to disseminate information on state petitions, labor organizing, sale of estates, political organizing, protest, transportation, and education.

Scope and Contents

This collection was created through the composition of materials removed from other A&M collections, staff collected materials, and the merging of smaller collections. As a result, this collection covers a wide range of activities and movements from West Virginia and the larger Appalachian region. The subject areas of the collection include: 1) state petitions, and government announcements, 1777-1979; 2) public announcements, public sales, and advertisements, 1853-1899; 3) elections, political ephemera, 1777-1999; 4) West Virginia University, Storer College, education, lectures, educational programs, student activism, Greek life, 1865-2012; 5) Civil War, slavery, reconstruction, 1861-1877; 6) WWI, WWII, 1913-1946; 7) events, concerts, entertainment, 1853-2012; 8) unions, mining, coal mining, labor movements, socialism, strikes, rallies, protests, feminism, environment, 1890-1999.

Index Card Notes: To the honorable speaker and members of the House of Delegates of Virginia. Your petitioners of the county of Berkeley beg leave to represent your honorable body that in this and neighboring counties the cultivation of tobacco has now been replaced almost entirely by wheat and flour a most important staple. The farmers and millers are forced by lack of space to store the surplus with merchants who carry on unjust speculation on the property of others... etc. [sic]... your petitioners conceive that by providing by law ware-houses for flour at ports and places, as to the legislature may appear convenient, to appoint inspectors at such ware-houses, pay a fixed salary to the inspectors whose duty it shall be to receive and store the flour, to issue notes, and to [be] answerable for the redelivery when called for... and in other respects regulate the subjects to the principles of the tobacco law. Index Card Notes: To the senate and house of delegates of VA. The petition of the subscribers, citizens of the city of Wheeling, in the county of Ohio, respectfully sheweth, that, by the charter of 1836, the power of the council to tax titheables and real estate, is wisely limited; yet by the same charter, the council is empowered to tax auctioneers, ordinary keepers, &c. at their discretion. If it be wise or proper, that the power of the council offer general objects of taxation be limited and circumscribed, so should their power of taxing particular interests and smaller classes of persons be limited... your petitioners also pray that the charter of said city be further amended, so the mayor and sergeant thereof may hereafter be elected by the qualified voters of said city. Such amendment, by drawing the attention of the citizens more to the selection of their two most important city officers would have a beneficial tendency.

The undersigned, inhabitants of the county of Monongalia, beg leave to represent, that at the last election your petitioners were informed that John Clayton and Caleb Tanxey were elected as delegates from this county and the public mind seemed to be reconciled. But the sheriffs, on the grounds of some supposed mistake, reversed their first proclamation, and declared one James Evans elected in place of said Tanxey. The proceedings have thrown such a doubt and uncertainty over the final result, as to believing the election should be set aside and a new election awarded so the people be heard fairly and unequivocally speak their will on this subject.-- May it please the body over which you preside to do so.
